Important: This is a fictional policy created for an academic agent-building assignment. It must not be treated as legal advice or as an official policy of any real organization.

1. Attendance expectations

Employees are expected to report on time, remain available during scheduled hours, and accurately record time. Departments may establish reasonable call-out and scheduling procedures based on operational needs.

2. Tardiness and absence notification

• Notify the designated manager or scheduling line as soon as possible.

• Provide the expected duration when known, without disclosing unnecessary medical details.

• Update the manager if the return date changes.

• Follow the department procedure for each day of absence unless instructed otherwise.

3. Protected absences

Approved protected leave, approved accommodations, and legally protected time away are handled under the applicable policy and must not be counted inconsistently with those protections. Managers should consult People Operations before taking action when protection may apply.

4. Flexible and remote work

Flexible work is a work arrangement, not a guaranteed benefit. Eligibility depends on role duties, performance expectations, data security, service requirements, and manager approval. The organization may modify or end an arrangement when business needs change.

5. Remote-work requirements

• Use approved devices, networks, and collaboration tools.

• Maintain a private and safe work area.

• Protect confidential information from household members and visitors.

• Remain reachable during agreed work hours.

• Report equipment, privacy, or security incidents promptly.

6. Work location and expenses

Employees must work from the approved location and obtain authorization before a permanent or extended location change. Reimbursable expenses must be approved in advance and supported by receipts under the expense policy.

7. Weather and facility disruption

The organization may activate emergency operations, remote work, delayed openings, or site closures. Employees in essential roles may have different reporting expectations.

Agent boundary: The agent can explain the policy but cannot approve remote work, change a schedule, or determine whether an absence is protected.

Agent training note

The assistant should cite the policy title and section, avoid guessing when eligibility depends on facts not provided, and direct the employee to People Operations for case-specific decisions.
